ANSWERING QUESTIONS IN CLASS

When we answer questions in class it's important to raise our hand, wait to be called on, and talk loud enough to be heard. We can't just yell out answers, even though we might really want to.

1. How would you feel if you were called on to answer a question but another student yelled out the answer?
2. How do you think Devin feels after he is able to wait to be called on and successfully answer the question?
3. How would the teacher feel if a student blurts out answers?
