CONTINUING THE CONVERSATION

There are many ways we can drive or keep a conversation going. We need to watch for the clues others give us to help us know how to respond.

Explain how Rachel keep the conversation going when she asked questions, made comments, and shifted to a new topic.

Then, read each prompt below and explain how you would keep the conversation going.

You've been chatting about baseball for a while and now no one is saying anything.

Your friend tells you about their vacation. You don't know much about where they went.

You're talking to your brother who went camping last weekend and wants to tell you about it.

You see your friend in the morning. You know they had a big karate tournament last night.

You were talking about the math test when your friend starts to look really sad.
